Arts, Media, and Culture: A Biblical Point of View

Christians wonder how they are to relate to the culture. Should they merely separate from the world or is there a place for them to transform culture? How does that apply to art and media. What does the Bible say about art and music?

These are significant questions that deserve thoughtful answers. The contributors to this book provide practical, biblical answers so that Christians can evaluate art, media, and culture with biblical discernment.

On Two Wings

On Two Wings: Humble Faith and Common Sense at the American Founding by Michael Novak

Poverty and Wealth: Why Socialism Doesn't Work

Ronald A. Nash shows why socialism leads to deprivation rather than abundance.

Although this book is over two decades old, the principles it teaches still apply. Nash shows that market economies lead inevitably to abundance and political freedom because they are based on reality. By contrast, socialism results in equal deprivation for the majority and abundance for the privileged few. As William Simon says, "Nash's book presents a clear and concise lesson in the real world of economics for Christians who genuinely wish to help the poor, and who are prepared to learn from the mistakes of the past."

Crisis of Purpose—Physical breakdowns, loss of parents, and the surrender of youthful dreams, signal your appointment with the gut-wrenching question, “Is this all there is?”
Crisis of Disillusionment—Every American generation has retired wealthier than their parents. Yours won't. Are you ready to cope?
Crisis of Priorities—Beer ads convinced us that “you can have it all,” but now our generation has too many choices and too little time. Which priorities will you choose?
Crisis of Relationships—We are in the era of disposable relationships. Selfishness and convenience have replaced duty and commitment as the ties that bind. But for millions, those ties are now unraveling.
Crisis of Loneliness—Like the characters in the TV sitcom Cheers, do you long for a place “where everybody knows your name”?
